International Ambassadors of Science and Technology, Uppsala University - description of the approach

The purpose of the ambassadors is to attract students to our Master programmes.

Preparation

The person who has been granted funding (Programme Director and/or student) meets the faculty's information officer and provides information on what it means going on a trip as an ambassador. Subsequently, a follow-up meeting will be held when the ambassador presents the finished preparation and reporting of the visit arrangements. A written evaluation shall be submitted within one month after returning home.

How to precede

The students will contact their former university and make all the necessary contacts. The visit may be to the university where the students performed their candidate training, and possibly also with other universities in the same city.

It is advisable to contact the university's International Office, International Relations Office or the student's former institution and inquire about the possibility of arranging a seminar for students on a particular topic on the theme of "Master of Science at Uppsala University." Sometimes the student union at the university in question can help, especially with regard to marketing.

Key issues to universities

- Can you help with a venue for the meeting?
- Can you help to spread information about the visit through emails, posters or other channels?

Other support from faculty

Faculty can assist with making a poster that can be used to advertise the seminar. A pdf-file can then be sent to the University to print there. Contact Anders Sahlin/Elin Eriksson for this.

The Faculty pays for the trip. The trip must be booked through the University's travel agency and the cheapest option will be selected.
